M.Ed. in Exceptional Children and Youth 4+1 Track

Information Sessions

September 29 and October 7

Freshmen, sophomores, and juniors are invited to an information session about the School of Education's 4+1 program in Exceptional Children and Youth, which offers concentrations in Elementary Special Education, Secondary Special Education, and Autism/Severe Disabilities.

Program details

The 4+1 options are exclusively for UD undergraduate education majors who want to begin their master’s degree while they are still undergraduates.

Students apply to the M.Ed. in Exceptional Children and Youth in December of their junior year and take courses in their senior year that may count towards both their undergraduate and master’s degrees. The master’s degree is completed in the fifth year.

Concentrations include
- Elementary Special Education
- Secondary Special Education
- Autism/Severe Disabilities

Advantages include
- the ability to complete a master’s degree in 1 year rather than 2 years,
- 2 supervised practicum experiences (student teaching as an undergraduate and a teaching internship as a graduate student),
- An additional area of expertise which would help you grow professionally,
- An additional certification that may lead to increased job prospects, and
- A master’s degree that typically leads to a higher starting salary.

Information session dates

Please come to the meeting that best fits your schedule. Two sessions will be offered during the Fall semester.
